SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Civil Rights Movement and the Federal Government: Records of the Department of Justice’s Civil Rights Division, 1958–1973 highlights attempts by the federal government to combat civil rights infringements and violations from roughly 1918 to 1973. The files specifically document actions by the Department of Justice’s Civil Rights Division, which was established in December 1957 by Attorney General William P. Rogers. According to the Department of Justice (DOJ) 1955 annual report, the Civil Rights Section (later to become the Civil Rights Division), “supervises and assists in the enforcement of various statutes employed to protect the federally secured civil rights and liberties of persons” (Reel 6, Frame 0741). The collection comprises the files of six different officials in the DOJ’s Civil Rights Division: W. Wilson White (assistant attorney general of the Civil Rights Division, 1958–1959), Joseph M. F. Ryan Jr. (acting assistant attorney general in the Civil Rights Division, 1958–1960), Burke Marshall (assistant attorney general in the Civil Rights Division, 1961–1964), St. John Barrett (deputy assistant attorney general, Civil Rights Division, 1965–1967), John Doar (assistant attorney general, Civil Rights Division, 1960–1967), and David L. Norman (acting assistant attorney general, Civil Rights Division, 1969–1973). Within each section, the material is organized by subject, and consists of letters, legislation, reports, and newspaper clippings.

The Civil Rights Division records chronicle a variety of civil rights issues including lynching; differing federal and state perspectives on civil rights; school desegregation and closures; state and local segregation laws; appropriate DOJ role in civil rights matters; court cases, and congressional legislation and hearings dealing with civil rights issues; various civil rights acts and their provisions; voting rights and voter registration; numerous types of racial discrimination; DOJ annual reports of Civil Rights Division activities; and DOJ assessments of constitutional law and a variety of civil rights topics.

The files of W. Wilson White actually span the years 1918–1963. The focus of these files is the DOJ’s position on antilynching legislation and the legislation itself. White’s files include numerous statements by DOJ officials in support of antilynching legislation. In a 1951 letter from Deputy Attorney General Peyton Ford to Emanuel Celler, Ford wrote, “The Department of Justice has long supported legislation to protect persons against lynching. It has long endeavored to enforce the civil rights of individuals to the fullest extent possible and recognizes that there is a need for the enactment of a statute making lynching a federal crime” (Reel 1, Frame 0127).

Just four years earlier, however, DOJ officials Turner L. Smith and Fred G. Folsom wrote the following to the President’s Committee on Civil Rights, “It seems to us here in the Civil Rights section that too much emphasis has been placed upon ‘law’ rather than upon the economic and social side of the problem. Campaigns to interest people in better housing, medical services, education, proper dieting and stronger participation in public affairs, are the appropriate instruments in our judgment to apply to the ‘sore’ rather than crusades to bring about utopia by legislative edict” (Reel 1, Frame 0564). Twelve years later in 1959, commenting on S. 1848, White himself had still another opinion of antilynching legislation. He argued that the best way to protect people from lynching was by constitutional amendment. White took this position because he feared that any legislation introduced in Congress would blur the line between federal and state authority, and thus would face potential challenges in the courts (Reel 1, Frames 0928–0941). White’s files include copies of antilynching bills put forward between 1918 and 1963, as well as information on the DOJ’s role in investigating or prosecuting lynching cases. White’s files also include material on the brutal lynching in 1959 of Mack Charles Parker in Poplar, Mississippi. In this case, the DOJ asserted that the denial of due process made lynching a federal crime. A file on the 1961 Freedom Rides includes memoranda from Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy to Alabama Governor John Patterson. Other files of White focus on school desegregation litigation, including cases from across the South. A folder on school closings and tuition grants covers Virginia’s “massive resistance” to school desegregation, a comprehensive legal effort to prevent school desegregation in Virginia.

The files of Joseph M. F. Ryan Jr. chronicle the issue of military dependents attending segregated schools with specific discussion of Jacksonville Elementary School at Little Rock Air Force Base. Ryan’s files also cover voting rights and proposed legislation for voting referees.

The records of Burke Marshall prominently document DOJ involvement in ending discrimination in bus transportation, state and local segregation laws, sit-in cases, and DOJ annual reports that chronicle Civil Rights Division activities. Reel 4, Frames 0489–0681 contain an undated report by Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy to the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) regarding racial discrimination in bus transportation. The textual portion of the report is rather short and mainly conveys the existence of racial discrimination with recommendations for regulating bus transportation. The report contains six appendixes that constitute the bulk of the report: Appendix A contains a list of complaints against bus companies for racial discrimination (by city and state); Appendix B contains results from Federal Bureau of Investigation surveys regarding racial discrimination in bus terminals (by city and state); Appendix C contains photographs of bus terminals showing segregated waiting rooms, restaurants, ticket offices, etc.; Appendix D contains a letter of support for the attorney general from Secretary of State Dean Rusk; Appendix E contains a similar letter from Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara; and Appendix F contains proposed regulations for bus transportation. Marshall’s files also contain an undated copy of and report on H.R. 7152, the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The report begins with an introduction of the bill and then examines Titles I–XI in depth. Exhibit A of the report discusses the constitutionality of the title prohibiting discrimination in public facilities, which includes reviews of applicable portions of the Fourteenth, Thirteenth, Fifth, and Tenth amendments to the U.S. Constitution. Exhibit B provides a summary of state laws prohibiting discrimination in public facilities, while Exhibit C lists states with laws prohibiting discrimination in employment. Exhibit D summarizes House amendments to the bill. Marshall’s records also include discussions about Title 28, United States Code, section 1443 (28 U.S.C. 1443), which allowed the federal government to take over jurisdiction of civil rights cases and issues from states and localities due to discriminatory practices of those states and localities.

The files of St. John Barrett highlight segregation laws and school desegregation in Arkansas, and ICC involvement in ending discrimination in transportation.

The records of John Doar consist of end-of-year and annual reports, jury instructions in conspiracy cases, legal memoranda outlining DOJ policy for handling various types of discrimination, and school desegregation cases. The end-of-year and annual reports in Doar’s files, and in Marshall’s files, chronicle Civil Rights Division involvement in civil rights cases.
and review various types of racial discrimination and efforts to combat them. Doar’s files on conspiracy cases contain instructions to juries hearing 18 U.S.C. 241 and 242 cases. Title 18, United States Code, section 241 deals with persons conspiring to deprive other persons of their civil rights, while section 242 covers deprivations of civil rights by federal, state, and local officials even acting in their official capacities. Reel 7, Frame 0919 begins the jury instructions given in U.S. v. Price (the case brought against eighteen defendants for the murder of three civil rights workers in Mississippi, which was later portrayed in the movie Mississippi Burning); Frame 0990 begins the jury instructions given in U.S. v. Myers (a case charging white defendants with depriving black citizens of their civil rights); Frame 1025 begins the jury instructions in U.S. v. Wilkins (the case brought against white defendants for the murder of white civil rights activist Viola Liuzzo); and Frame 1053 begins the jury instructions in U.S. v. Patridge (a case charging white defendants with depriving black citizens of their civil rights).

Information on these and other topics can be found by consulting the Subject Index and Principal Correspondents Index at the back of this guide, or by browsing through the Reel Index. Since the entire collection deals with civil rights, this subject is only indexed with a list of corresponding “see” references. It should be noted, however, that the subject of civil rights appears repeatedly throughout the collection. In addition, the Department of Justice has not been indexed, but its imprint also appears repeatedly throughout the collection.

Other collections from LexisNexis that may be of interest include Civil Rights During the Eisenhower Administration; Civil Rights During the Kennedy Administration; Civil Rights During the Johnson Administration; Civil Rights During the Nixon Administration; Department of Justice Classified Subject Files on Civil Rights, 1914–1949; and Papers of the NAACP.

Department of Justice Classified Subject Files on Civil Rights, 1914–1949

Papers of the NAACP
The Civil Rights Movement and the Federal Government: Records of the Department of Justice’s Civil Rights Division, 1958–1973 highlights attempts by the federal government to combat civil rights infringements and violations from roughly 1918 to 1973. The files specifically document actions by the Department of Justice’s Civil Rights Division, which was established in December 1957 by Attorney General William P. Rogers. According to the Department of Justice (DOJ) 1955 annual report, the Civil Rights Section (later to become the Civil Rights Division), “supervises and assists in the enforcement of various statutes employed to protect the federally secured civil rights and liberties of persons” (Reel 6, Frame 0741).

The Civil Rights Division records chronicle a variety of civil rights issues including lynching; differing federal and state perspectives on civil rights; school desegregation and closures; state and local segregation laws; appropriate DOJ role in civil rights matters; court cases, and congressional legislation and hearings dealing with civil rights issues; various civil rights acts and their provisions; voting rights and voter registration; numerous types of racial discrimination; DOJ annual reports of Civil Rights Division activities; and DOJ assessments of constitutional law and a variety of civil rights topics.

Reel 11, Frames 0392–0539, for example, provide information on Alabama state segregation laws, including laws to keep Alabama public schools segregated. Among the copies of laws is a statement by Governor George C. Wallace regarding desegregation and Alabama public schools. Wallace asserts, “When I ran for Governor and in my inaugural address, I stated without equivocation that as Governor I would maintain segregation of the races in the public schools of this State…. To hold the line, we have fought many legal battles, and we have been able to keep the N.A.A.C.P. out of Alabama since 1956, a fact which has had a distinct bearing on our success in this fight…. I recommend that we continue to maintain segregation of the races in our public schools. I recommend that we resist to the fullest all attempts to integrate our schools…. We should make it known at all times that when they take us on that they are in for the fight of their lives. We can win if we stand firm, if we remain resolute and steadfast” (Frame 0481).

This collection offers a valuable glimpse into the work of the federal government to curb and end racial discrimination in the United States. It provides an extensive and in-depth look at the school desegregation progress in the South, while also documenting other racially discriminatory practices. This collection will appeal to students of a wide variety of topics, including civil rights, race relations, lynching, school desegregation, federal-state relations, and constitutional law.
